

Attention Families!

Families often rely on the help of natural resources when they are caregiving for a loved one. Sometimes natural resources may be found within the family or friend circles, within the community, or even in support groups.

While resources may be plentiful for some families, other families face a shortage of vital natural resources. Join us as we discuss the types of natural resources families may utilize, the difficulties we may face, as well as tips and resources to help expand those natural resources and think outside of the box.

This training will be offered three times in April, and you only need to sign up once. A copy of the presentation along with the training recording will be emailed to all who register.
